The Nineteenth Sunday after Pentecost

First Reading: Jeremiah 31:27-34

Comment: "Promise of a new covenant"

In our Hebrew Bible reading the prophet foresees a new covenant which God will make with the Lord's own people, a covenant written not on tablets of stone but on human hearts. Israel and Judah have broken the covenant that the Lord made when he brought them out of slavery in Egypt. Now they are about to go into exile. Yet the days are coming when their sins will be forgiven, and God will establish a new relationship with them. This covenant will be based not on external law but on an inner knowing of the Lord.

Psalm 119:97-104

A celebration of the wisdom that comes from meditation upon God's law.

SECOND READING (The Epistle): 2 Timothy 3:14-4:5

Comment: "Christ the judge"

In this lesson, Paul exhorts Timothy to continue calmly and diligently with his ministry, teaching from the scriptures and preaching the word of God. The passage suggests a period in the life of the church when there were a number of teachers, who called themselves Christians but who presented their own versions of the faith. Now is a time to stress the essentials. Timothy is urged to remain established in what he has been taught and in the scriptures, meaning here the writings of the Old Testament, which are useful for many forms of instructions.

THE HOLY GOSPEL: Luke 18:1-8

Comment: "A widow begs for justice"

In our Gospel, Jesus tells a comic parable about a judge who was so pestered by a woman that he finally gave in to her pleas. The evangelist tells the story in order to commend persistent prayer. It would be particularly appropriate at a time when the people were losing heart. An earlier focus of the parable was probably on the corrupt and impious judge. If even such a man as this will finally render justice, how much more will God hear those who call on God.
