The Twenty-second Sunday after Pentecost

First Reading: Haggai 1:1-5b-2:9

Comment: "The promise to restore Judah"
In our Hebrew scripture lesson the prophet Haggai summons Zerubbabel, the governor of Judah, and Joshua, the high priest, to attend to the reconstruction of the temple in Jerusalem, laid to waste some fifty years earlier. Jerusalem is still ruled from Babylon but is permitted some measure of self-governance: Those who have returned from exile have attended to their needs but have not taken an interest in the Lord's temple. Because their priorities have not been in order, the prophet tells them, they want for many things. The path to prosperity lies in placing first the things of God.

Psalm 145:1-5, 17-21

A hymn of praise to the Lord, who is mighty in deeds yet tender and compassionate.

SECOND READING (The Epistle): 2 Thessalonians 2:1-5,13-17

Comment: "The coming of Jesus Christ"
This epistle was written in part as a correction to a misunderstanding about the "day of the lord," which some in the early Christian community feared had already arrived. The apostle seeks to lay to rest their fears, and to encourage them to a more mature faith, sure of God's grace and confident of their standing in the Lord. Many signs will precede the final day of judgement, and the Lord Jesus Christ will win a definitive and clear victory over all opposing forces. Prayer is offered for good hope and comfort that will strengthen the Thessalonian disciples in their every word and good work.

THE HOLY GOSPEL: Luke 20: 27-38

Comment: "Jesus speaks of the resurrection"
In the gospel the Sadducees ask a question about the resurrection, Jesus replies that resurrection means a different existence from earthly life, and that it depends on a God who has a personal and living relationship with all people. The Sadducees did not believe in resurrection from death, and they attempted to make it seem absurd by asking what would then be the legal situation for a person who had been married several times. Jesus cuts through their apparent cleverness. There is no need for marriage after the resurrection. What is more, the Bible continues to speak of the patriarchs as though they were still alive before God.
